

WILLIAMSBURG, WHITLEY COUNTY.

—The Congregational church has been beautifully papered.

—Prof. and Mrs. E. E. Wood are keeping house in the Morris property.

—An infant child of Mr. and Mrs. James Watts was buried last Saturday.

—I am back in Williamsburg again after a very pleasant visit to Central Kentucky.

—Mr. R. S. Crawford is attending court in Pineville. Mr. J. M. Sharp is in London this week.

—Miss Carrie Myers returned from an extended visit to Mt. Vernon and Lancaster Saturday evening.

—The prohibitionists held a convention here Monday, at which H. T. Stephens was nominated for the Legislature.

—The republicans held a primary last Thursday and nominated Chas. Finley for the Legislature and Adam Siler for school superintendent.

—Mr. B. F. Rose is building a residence on the hill near Mr. J. T. Freeman. Prof. Gorman Jones has begun his new house near the depot.

—Rev. J. M. Prestidge, of Winchester, has accepted a call to the Baptist church at this place. He will also be president of the Williamsburg Institute.

—The young people of the Christian church have organized a Y. P. C. E. with about 25 charter members. This is a good start considering there is a society at the Congregational church and a league at the M. E. church.

—I find among the arrivals since I left a son at Mr. J. L. Whitehead's and one also at Mr. J. M. Ellison's. Both of these gentlemen are dressed up in their Sunday clothes and wearing broad smiles over the arrivals of their first sons.

—A man by the name of Adler presented a check to the bank here last week and obtained the money on it. Mr. Siler says this is the first time he has ever been too good to a stranger. Mr. Adler was a sharper and the check a forgery.

—Mr. H. S. Wood, with the Standard Drug Co., gave our town a call Monday. Ed Mayhan, Wesley Perkins, Misses Alice and Fannie O'Mara returned from Chicago Saturday night. Dr. W. F. Finley left last Saturday for Stewart, Va., where he will be married to Miss Ida Preston. Mr. E. M. Hugely was in Danville, Tuesday, buying his holiday goods from a New York drummer.

—Miss Irene Carson died at the home of her uncle, O. B. Havis, Monday, Oct. 9, of consumption, aged 17 years. Miss Carson was born in Morristown, Tenn., and resided there until about one year ago, when she came to Williamsburg to live. She was a consistent and devoted member of the Presbyterian church and was loved by all who knew her. She was buried Tuesday evening in the Woodland cemetery.

—The people in this section do not feel the need of, and appreciate the separate coach bill as it is in other parts of the State, yet it is working like a charm. Now if we could only have a box car to put men in who get drunk and make beasts of themselves, I think the traveling public could get along comfortably. On last Friday evening as I was returning home, a man who claimed to be a gentleman and a man of influence, boarded the train at Livingston, drunk, and used such obscene language that a decent man could not listen to him without blushing with shame and yet he was permitted to ride in the ladies' car. No man should be valued higher than he deserves and when he makes a brute of himself he should be treated by other people as such.

—Miss Ray E., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Whitsett was married Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock to Mr. J. L. Ruse, of Dawson, Penn. The bridal party entered the parlor preceded by Miss Lou Whitsett and Mr. Charles W. Ruse, followed by Mr. Johnnie and Miss Mamie Whitsett, brother and sister of the bride. The ceremony was performed by Elder J. E. Tercy in a very eloquent and impressive manner, after which Mr. and Mrs. Ruse led the way to the dining room, where an elegant supper was served. The bride was dressed in white satin and ribbon trimmed with white duchesse lace and wore a beautiful wreath of orange blossoms. The bridal couple left for their home at Dawson, Penn., on the 12 o'clock train, carrying with them the best wishes of the many friends Miss Whitsett had made during her short stay in Williamsburg.

Seven Hundred thousand people upon one square mile of territory is a sight for gods and men and a fitting exhibition for "Chicago Day," but the average mortal finds reading about it pleasanter and more profitable than participating in it. It is even noted as a remarkable feature of the occasion that not more than 150 people had to be taken to the Emergency Hospital and but a half-dozen were killed outright. However, it was almost worth one's life to hear Mayor Carter Harrison blushing confession before such a multitude that the blood of Pocahontas flows through his bluegrass veins.—The Times.

CRAB ORCHARD.

—Geo. Lee James has bought a beautiful little pony and is breaking her to drive. She is a free going little animal and very graceful.

—J. T. Chadwick is having his barn removed from the front to the back of his lot. We hear he is going to extend his veranda to the south side of his residence and enlarge and beautify his premises.

—Some one in attempting to steal chickens of Mrs. Gormley left a new meal sack near the hen-house, which they can have by calling for it. She only meant for them to leave the chickens when she screamed at them.

—R. H. Bronaugh shipped seven of his fine Duroc Red Jersey pigs. Mr. John R. Wilhite, of Monticello got three and Mr. Boliver Bond, of Woodford two pairs. They were three months old and averaged 75 pounds and sold at $10 per head.

—Brooks, who cut P. Parrish some time ago has given himself up and his examining trial comes up to-day. Judge Ward Moore is kept quite busy lately. A fight occurred between Sallie Hamber and Della Guest, both colored. Each was fined $8 and cost.

—Misses Cettie and Hattie Henry and Miss Florence Harris, a pretty trio from Lancaster, visited Miss Lizzie Beazley this week. Mrs. C. C. Stormes, of Lancaster, is at the Harris House, this being her second visit to our healing waters this season. Miss Hattie Harris is still confined to her bed being able to sit up very little. Up to date Barney has made 10 starts, won six races, was second twice and unplaced twice. His gross winnings amount to $4,100 and he is yet to start in a $2,000 purse at Nashville. Saturday he paced an eighth of a mile in 13 1/2 seconds—a 1:48 gait.

—Miss Bertie Carpenter has returned to Cincinnati to complete a special course in medicine. Prof. Sibold will assist the choir at the Christian church during the protracted meeting. Rev. W. W. Bruce has an interesting class at his new home, the parsonage. He and family are not yet domiciled.

—Mrs. L. B. Adams, of Longview, Ala., is with her father, Mr. Hugh Logan. Mr. H. W. Drye and bride were the guests of Mr. S. G. Drye. Among those who left for the World's Fair last week were Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Robinson, Messames M. G. Thomson, Jane Cloyd and Jennie Carpenter, Misses Ethel Van-Arsdale, Bertie Enoch, Mac Logan, Annie Johnson and Kate Baughman. Mr. Ed. Stagg is out after a severe illness. His father, Mr. Dan Stagg, Sr., has also been quite sick.

—John Kohl, of Madison, Ind., mistook, in a thicket, his nephew for a squirrel and banded loose, fatally wounding him.

A Big Time at Lexington.

LEXINGTON, Oct. 10.—The meeting of the Grand Lodge I. O. O. F. and the trotting races here this week have drawn visitors by the thousands and things are exceedingly lively. In the big parade to-day Stanford Lodge No. 159, headed by the Uniformed Stanford Gold Band, made a magnificent display "with plumes and banners gay" and was extravagantly complimented, as was also the Danville Lodge, which is composed of most excellent and courteous gentlemen. About 2,000 Odd Fellows were in the parade, which consisted of a journey of fully three miles on foot and the band boys especially got exceedingly warm about the collar before it was through with, but Gus Jaubert's unexcelled burgoon and accompaniments that were served when Woodland Park was reached, together with the easy flow of oratory, assisted materially in making the day pass swiftly and pleasantly.

Lexington didn't get to be the Capitol, but she's a capital city all the same. Mr. J. D. McMurray, who has been one of the managers of the fire department here for 20 years, kindly showed the Stanford fire department through his establishment to-day. One of the many fine horses that he uses has been in the service for 18 years and you bet this animal above all others is thoroughly conversant with his business.

Dr. Lee F. Huffman's Stanford friends were dropping in to see him all day and found that he is enjoying allurative practice in his profession and has become exceedingly popular.

It seemed to be the general impression here to-day that the 18-year-old tuba manipulator of the Stanford band, Samuel Tilden Cook, is the best in the State. He is just simply a musical prodigy. The splendid race track was never in a better condition and the horses are going round the circle fast enough this week to make a fellow's head swim, especially if he occasionally visits the "basement" of the grand stand. I saw, at a distance, the Lincoln sports picking out the winners, there were getting there in the flying time of 2:08, 2:09, and so on.

—The report that is being industriously circulated that the democrats will not support Dr. W. L. Lowder, candidate for county superintendent of schools, is as false as it is silly. We have heard of but one democrat who will not vote for him, while we have heard of a number of republicans who will support him. Dr. Lowder is taking care of himself.

—Rev. Edgar Fogle and his sister, Miss Lizzie, are at the World's Fair. Mrs. J. M. Durham has returned from Campbellsville. Hon. W. H. Miller, democratic candidate for the State Senate, passed through town one day last week on his way from Liberty. M. S. McMullin, who got his arm badly mangled while coupling cars on the C. & G., some time ago, is doing well and will take charge of the post office at Yosemite in a few days. Rev. G. C. Smith, who was an applicant for that office, has since his defeat gone over to the prohibitionists. He is said to have made a rousing speech in that party's convention at Liberty on the 21st ult.

The announcement of the death of Mrs. Cornelia Livingstone Fulton Cray, daughter of the world-famous inventor of the steamboat, is erroneous in at least one respect. The world-fame of inventing the steamboat attaches to Fulton, but it rightfully belongs to Fitch, who sleeps in an humble grave at Bardonia, Ky.

Kinnaird and Dick Beazley have returned from Chicago.

—A large and appreciative audience assembled at the court-house on Monday evening to listen to an address by Hon. Sam Embury, of Hopkinsville, on behalf of the Keeley Institute at Crab Orchard. He held the undivided attention of his hearers for an hour and a half and received at the close a well-merited round of applause. His illustrations were apt and couched in the choicest language. The entire address was admirable and delivered with all the fervor of one thoroughly impressed with the importance of his subject. The friends of temperance were delighted with the address and were outspoken in praise of the speaker. The Lancaster band furnished excellent music for the occasion.

Nashville, Tenn., March 6, 1893.—The Stockton Medicine Co., Nashville, Tenn., Gentlemen: It gives me exceeding pleasure to speak of your Antiseptic, as I consider it something wonderful in the way of medicine. My old servant, Albert, who is 72 years old, was very sick with Pneumonia, complicated with Heart Trouble and Dropsy. I called in my family physician and gave him every attention, but the doctor finally told me there was no hope and the only thing that could be done was to make him comfortable until the end. At this point I decided to give him Stockton's Antiseptic, as it seemed to be performing almost miracles for others. It was given in regular doses every three hours and the fever began to decrease from the first dose and a decided improvement was noticed the first day. In three days he was sitting up and in a week he was back at his work as usual, and is regaining in strength very fast. I conscientiously believe it saved the old man's life. Respectfully yours, —At the sale of T. D. Hill's effects yesterday there was a fairly good crowd. Farming implements went low. Milk cows at $19 to $30; 2 year-old heifers $23; yoke oxen $75.25; bull $26; fat hogs 5.95; shoats 3½. The home tract of land containing 247 acres was sold at $17.50.

FRANK SEARIGHT,

—The Stallion Representative Stake, worth $11,950, was won at Lexington by Oro Wilkes, the favorite. Medio was second. Best time 2:14½. Georgia Lee, owned by G. & C. P. Cecil, Danville, came fourth in the race and was second the last heat, which was made in 2:17½.

—The Georgetown Times reports recent stock sales at the following prices: 34 head of three-year-old cattle, weight about 1,300 pounds, sold at $47 per head, one lot of 2 year-olds at $27.00 per head; 42 yearlings at $21.25 per head; 500 stock ewes at $2.40 to $2.95. Hay at $7.50 to $16 per stack.

—Directum won the free-for-all at Lexington Wednesday in the sensational time of 2:09½; 2:08½ and 2:08. The fastest four consecutive heats ever trotted were in this race, Pixley winning the second heat in 2:08½. Guivette won the 2:14 pace; best time 2:10½, and Silent Brook won the 2:29 trot in straight heats; 2:18½ in each heat.

—Both mare and foal will fret less during weaning if hitched at first in opposite corners of a large box-stall, where they can see each other and get their noses together, but the halter shank must be short, so that it will not permit the foal to reach the dam's udder. If a wide stall is not at hand, place the mare and foal in adjoining narrow stalls, and have an aperture in the partition separating the stalls of sufficient size and so located that they can get their noses together.

—There is fine sport at Lexington now and records are being smashed every once in a while. Harrietta, the game and speedy daughter of Alcione, not only lowered her record Tuesday by two seconds, but made a track record for the Lexington course of 2:09½. She won the Transylvania stake in straight heats with Cartridge second. Time 2:10½, 2:11, 2:09½. On the same day Happy Promise won the 2:24 class trotting with Delegate second. Best time 2:16½. Boreal won the yearling race in 2:18 with Ataliese second and Dolly Spanker captured the Cornercracker stakes for pacers in 2:16½, with Belle Acton a close second.

THE SIAMESE TWINS.

BILL NYE SAYS THEY WERE VERY NEAR TO EACH OTHER.

Though Differing Somewhat In Their Ideas and Habits, They Were Nevertheless Quite Inseparable—The Story of Their Life Touchingly Told.

[Copyright, 1893, by Edgar W. Nye.]

MOUNT AIRY, N. C., Sept. 26.

This town is a post village of Surry county, this state, and has cotton factories, flour mills, shoe factories for men and beast, tobacco factories for the same purpose, wool carding machines, mineral springs, newspapers, etc., but its principal hit was made as the home of the Siamese twins.

Settling here before the late war, these strange men, so different in character, yet so constantly thrown into each other's society by a circumstance which they could not prevent, and which was about 74 inches in length, lived until the winter of 1875-6 under the American name of Bunker. Here they were married, here their children were born, and here they died.

OLD NEIGHBORS OF THE TWINS.

er's society by a circumstance which they could not prevent, and which was about 74 inches in length, lived until the winter of 1875-6 under the American name of Bunker. Here they were married, here their children were born, and here they died.

Recently I have had the pleasure of reading an instructive article on these gentlemen prepared by M. A. Dufour for a French journal, and with the items of interest offered me by the old neighbors of Chang and Eng besides I venture to write a letter on these much talked of people from Siam.

M. Dufour goes on to state that "les d'exhiber leur 'trait-d'union' devant les curieux des deux mondes, ils avaient acquis une jolie fortune, a Mount Airy dans le comte de Surrey (Caroline du Nord) peti d'armees avant la guerre de secession, et pasedaient quelques esclaves."

Caroline du Nord is good. I shall have that put on my cards hereafter. Translated, M. Dufour's happy expression implies that, "tired of displaying their natal hyphen to the gaping crowds of both worlds, they had purchased a pretty farm at Mount Airy, Surry county, N. C., a few years before the war of secession. They owned a few slaves."

On this last question there is a difference between authorities. M. Dufour, who was thoroughly familiar with his subject, states positively that they were not antagonistic regarding the great question of the right to maintain and extend slavery—in other words, that the war did not separate Chang and Eng.

Yet I was told by a man who claimed to know them well that Chang owned one slave, while Eng did not, and did not favor the unholy traffic. Chang believed that, slavery being a good thing, one could not have too much of it, also that states had the right to regulate it as they would the liquor traffic, while Eng believed that it was a national question and finally refused to help catch and return Chang's nigger for him.

My informant said that this led to interminable strife between the two, and that when they were on their way home from the lodge, where Eng, not being a member, had reluctantly gone to see Chang take the thirty-second degree, they had an open rupture almost, after which Chang enlisted in the Confederate army and Eng in the northern army. Later, however, both deserted, noticing how awkward it would be in case one should suddenly decide to die for mother, home and country, while the other favored longevity.

This same man told me that when Nancy Bunker was born her father insisted that her Uncle Chang should run for the doctor.

Eng and Chang mean, in the Siamese tongue, with which I am perfectly familiar, "right" and "left." They were born at Bangsen, Siam, April 15, 1811, almost simultaneously.

They had a Chinese father, and their mother was one-half Chinese, the other half being Siamese.

In putting on their dress suits they left out the lower stud of the shirt in order to give room for the strange coffee colored conculper which joined the two at the base of the sternum.

The sternum is the breast bone.

These two twins were brought to the United States at the age of 18 and were on exhibition up to the time they settled down at Mount Airy.

They appeared jointly. Those who saw them say that Chang and Eng did much by their public appearances to elevate and refine those who saw them.

Still Chang was intemperate, according to Dr. Jacobi, and many a time Eng, who was quiet and sober, had to go on in Chang's place as an understudy.

Eng was a Baptist, and on the day he united with the church and was immersed Chang insisted on accompanying him in a beastly state of intoxication.

These were the best known twins in history, living to the age of 64, or nearly so. The Two Headed Nightingale is yet living at the age of 42, but is still single—that is, unmarried. I do not know how I would propose to the Two Headed Nightingale. I might be acceptable to one of her reasoning faculties, while the other might be more sensitive to horrible sights and refuse.

Chang had some literary ambition, while Eng did not. Chang's love for rum was a pretty good sign that he was a genius. Night after night he would pull Eng out of bed while sound asleep and jerk him around in the dark, jotting down memoranda of thoughts he had during the night. Chang had invented what he called the author's friend. It consisted of an illuminated wall at one end of the room made of a mixture which lighted it up so that he could preserve a thought which had made its appearance during the night.

He also invented the Edinburgh joke gimlet and used it successfully while in Scotland.

They were more irritated against each other after the war than before, for Chang lost his nigger and bitterly reproached Eng for being at the bottom of it. On top of all this, Eng tried to reconstruct Chang.

Chang married some time before the idea occurred to Eng, and though he entered fully into the spirit which prompted Chang to wed he often felt ill at ease and out of place sitting up late of nights during the courting and taking cold looking at the moon and pretending to be asleep.

Therefore he soon turned his attention toward marriage, and accompanied by his brother one evening made a proposal to Chang's sister-in-law. She rejected him, claiming that, according to her notions, relatives ought not to be too thick.

Nevertheless it was Chang's wife, who felt that she had bitten off more than she could masticate, who induced her sister at last, while under the influence of wine jelly, to accept Eng, and for some time the four occupied the same house, ate at the same table and drank from the same canteen. But jealousy arose, and as a result each husband built a separate house. Chang would go over and visit Eng for a week, and then Eng would come over and spend a week with Chang.

They were passionately fond of horse-back riding and baseball, Chang playing in the Surry team and Eng in the Mount Airy Sockless nine. This was told me by the man who claimed that Chang was married quietly, while Eng took his wife on a tour of European travel.

As farmers they had some trouble in certain kinds of work, but M. Dufour says that they often hoed in the field, using the "outside" arms to take hold of the hoe. They also enjoyed chopping wood, using the ax in the same manner. By a signal, consisting of a grunt, which seems to be necessary to the chopper anyway, the two struck simultaneously, the ax helve being grasped by the right hand of one and the left of the other, the hand nearest the ax being permitted to slip on the handle at the right moment, just as in ordinary chopping.

The children and grandchildren of Chang and Eng are scattered pretty well over the country. The brothers married two Misses Yates, and Nancy Bunker, the eldest child, had some educational advantages. She traveled in Europe with her father and uncle and acted as their secretary.

M. Dufour claims that the two brothers did not unite with the Baptist church, but that the widows and children did. Perhaps this is correct, for I am gradually losing faith in the man who said the brothers were immersed while Chang had a Siamese jag on.

Dr. Jacobi states that "the connection of the Siamese twins took place in their epigastric regions between the navel, which was common to both, and the ensiform processes, which were bent out in a forward direction and met very closely, held together by a ligamentous apparatus. The coupling itself was 8 inches in circumference and 2 1/2 in diameter. It contained a connection between the two livers and was composed partially of liver tissue."

The band was very curious from an anatomical standpoint, as the skin at the median line was mutually sensitive, and inside there was a combination of the peritoneum, so that after death a hand introduced into the abdomen of Chang entered two pouches reaching into Eng, and the reverse produced almost a similar result as to Chang.

Separation during life was therefore impossible. One evening in the winter of 1875-6 Chang went to bed feeling indisposed, and Eng, who was of a sociable turn of mind, joined him. After conversing for some time about their prospects, and finally getting somewhat acrimonious regarding their management, they at last compromised, agreeing that Chang should go under one management and Eng under another.

Then they dropped off to sleep. In the night a wild cry from Eng pierced the darkness, and when the family came

AT THE GRAVE OF THE TWINS.

Eng was found almost delirious with the discovery that he was linked to the dead body of his brother. He lived for an hour only, the fright and horror of his situation precipitating his death.

No cases are recorded of successful separation in cases similar to this, though it has been several times attempted.

Considerable trouble was made by the two sons, who came home from the west and heard on their arrival that the doctors had secured the bodies and gone away to get them photographed; also to see what made the "wheels go round." They gratified their morbid curiosity and then brought back the bodies, with thanks. The brothers were displeased about it, and so expressed themselves. Some people are perhaps morbidly sensitive about having their parents dissected that way.

A friend of mine named Quill Patterson says that his old doctor has Quill's father's stomach in alcohol, and though Quill has offered him over and over again four times what the organ is worth from a mercantile standpoint, hoping to obtain it and bury it with the old gentleman, the doctor claims that Quill can't positively identify it, and so just because Mr. Patterson, before his father's death, did not fix in his memory the features of the old gentleman's stomach so that he could recognize it anywhere he is now denied it by a man who has no real claim on it.

The Siamese twins were carefully examined by Drs. Pancoast and Agnew of Philadelphia, after which they were photographed, and no one to look at them could have believed that they had been so recently and thoroughly explored.

The sons reprieved their fathers, but not in time to prevent the exploration. Two modest marble monuments mark the graves of these two strange men.

It was first suggested that one large stone should be erected, but this was given up. The motto at the top was to have been:

UNITED WE STAND; DIVIDED WE FALL.

What the Dog Knew.

I happened one day to be in a Tennessee mountain town when an election was taking place, and there was one fellow who was doing more talking than anybody else and getting into repeated rows. He was followed everywhere by a shepherd dog, and late in the evening I found him on the edge of town in a most dilapidated condition, the result of a fight with the wrong man. The dog was trying to lead him home.

"Well," I said, "what's the matter?"

"Fightin'," was his brief response.

"You look it," said I, quite fearlessly, for I felt safe under the circumstances.

"That's a good dog you have. Do you want to sell him?"

"No, siree," he replied, brightening up a little. "Here, Carlo," he said, and the dog faced about and sat up.

Then he put him through a lot of difficult tricks, apparently forgetting all about his own battered condition.

"Why," I exclaimed, "blamed if he doesn't know as much as you do."

The man looked at me aggressively.

"More, mister," he said; "he knows enough to keep his mouth shut."—Detroit Free Press.

Knew It Was True.

Macready was playing in a country town, and upon a night when he proposed to perform "Macbeth" a small scene painter was cast to act The Bleeding Sergeant. At rehearsal the "star" was quiet enough, merely scanning the local performer as one prize fighter might judge of the points of another. When the night came, however, a very different scene was enacted. The sergeant dashed on, dropped upon his knee and said:

My lord, as I stood upon my watch upon the hill, Methought that Birnam wood 'gan move towards Dunsinane.

Thereupon Macready, with a growl of rage and the words, "Liar and slave!" rushed at the little man and shook him till his teeth rattled. The mauled performer made a bolt for it, and at the same time justified his conduct by screaming out: "It's true, s'elp me, Mr. Macready, sir. The stage manager told me to tell you!"—Argonaut.

Humble Pie.

The story is told of a well known New England clergyman that he once exchanged with a brother clergyman and was entertained at the house of a parishioner who was even too hospitable. She insisted upon his eating a large piece of mince pie for dinner, and the minister yielded against his better judgment.

The consequence was that he became violently ill and was unable to preach that afternoon. The doctor was summoned, and while he was ministering to his agonized patient the latter looked up and said feebly, but with an inimitable twinkle in his eye:

"Doctor, I'm not afraid to die, but I'm ashamed to!"—Youth's Companion.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original sample as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well! that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original.

"I'M A DAISY."

which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and flung aside with a triumphant ooo. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1894. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1895, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year: "A Yard of Fancies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

Those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1894 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the facts and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both home and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. TEA CAPS AND GOWNS

TWO DAYS AT A TAILOR MADE DRESSMAKER'S.

Dresses That Are Almost Classical in Their Form and Draping—Some Very Pretty Lounging Robes—A Hortense House Dress—The Serpentine Waists.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

There are several houses in New York that make a specialty of tea gowns and lounging robes, and others where nothing but tailor-made gowns are produced, unless possibly some habits and a few coats such as require strict tailor finish. Last week I devoted two days to going to see what they were producing for the benefit of such ladies as like to be in style while making their own garments. In one place I found the prettiest lot of tea caps that I have ever dreamed of. There was one of white crepe lisse, with an accordion plaited foundation, which was again laid in box plaits, so that the edge stood up all around in a succession of fluted ruffles. On the top there was about a yard of baby blue Tom Thumb ribbon tied in loops around a bunch of the crepe lisse, and standing upright in the center of this was a couple of milkweed puffs. The whole thing was as light as a thistle down and no larger than the palm of one's hand.

Crepe lisse and the very lightest of laces and most delicate of ribbons, feathers and flowers are the only things suitable for these delicate bits of finery, and it must be confessed that they are dainty and coquettish additions to a toilet. There was one to go with a royal blue velvet and figured peau de soie gown. The gown was cut pompadour in the neck. The tea cap was of blue gauze worked on the edges with fine gold threads. Standing up in front were several blue cornflowers, with two gold wheat ears. Who can say that was not lovely? Another that "went with" an old roseburg Bulgarian and lace tea gown had a cap that consisted of fine rosettes of pink silk muslin cut in deep notches on the edges, so that the full rosettes looked like so many lovely chrysanthemums.

There are others with faint hints of Italian, Turkish and Russian head wear about them scarcely strong enough to define, and yet they were there, and one or two bore a resemblance to a Queen of Scots' coif, with pearl edges. They were all tasteful, dainty and becoming, and their advent is a matter for congratulation.

The tea gowns are not less lovely, flowing and graceful than they have been heretofore, and some of them have a distinct character.

In one house where nothing is turned out but these creations there are numbers of tea gowns almost classical in their form and draping as well as trimming. I fell in love with one of heavy white armure silk, which has a long train, with the key pattern worked in gold around the bottom. There was over this a peplum of white cashmere, lined with maize colored Florentine, and this hung open instead of being closed. On all of the points were gold balls. There were loose sleeves which reached a full foot longer than the arm on the back. The upper part was looped up with a flat gold button on each shoulder. The skirt portion formed a waist gathered full around the bust and held in with a Greek belt of gold links and gold fringe to the pendant portion. The peplum came up to the neck in the back and fell loosely in front, showing the full waist.

Another elegant tea gown was of two shades of heliotrope, very dark and very light. The gown was cut snug princess in the back, with the fullness for the train laid in fan plaits between the seams at the waist line. The material was velvet and faille. The fronts were double—that is, there was a close princess front of faille and a loose one of velvet, lined with cream colored satin. The velvet fronts hung open naturally. Down the center of the front was a jabot of cream Spanish lace, with loops of pale heliotrope baby ribbon set in all the bends. Around the entire bottom the velvet was slashed and piped with silk, and under the slashes showed a ruffle of faille covered with lace. The sleeves were immense bishop, of corded silk the same shade as the faille, with velvet revers edged with a ruffle of lace of the same pattern, but not quite as wide as the jabot. I should have said that in the center of the back of the skirt there were two widths of faille, closely fan plaited at the top. This tea gown was naturally very costly, but it was superb.

There were very many lovely gowns in the printed silks overwhelmed with lace and ribbons. One beautiful gown was of pale blue and cream striped silk cut somewhat in a Japanese fashion to lap across the bust. All the side seams were left open, and under them showed a full accordion plaited skirt of rose pink crepon. Around the waist and tying in the back in a large bow with short ends was a sash made of wide cheney ribbon, the colors pink on a pale blue ground in wild rose pattern with delicate green leaves.

A lounging robe was very pretty, made of mode crepon, trimmed with white guipure around the bottom. It was cut princess in the back and with demi-train laid in close plaits. The front of the waist was drawn up into a loose drapery and had a deep basque frill of lace. There was a wide lace collar extending down the waist, jabot fashion, to the waist line, where it encircled two long magenta satin tabs, one of which was fastened under and one over the lace basque ruffle. The sleeves were bishop, made very long and caught up in loops a little above the elbows and let fall to just below them. They were gathered at the wrist in a manner quite popular just now and fell over the hand and were lined with lace. Such a gown as this is naturally for private house wear and takes the place of the old robe de chambre.

I saw another novel and attractive home dress made in the style rendered historical by Queen Hortense, though it differs a trifle, after all, from the old one. This had the short waist of rich black velvet brocade and the skirt of dark blue taffeta. The upper sleeves were of ribbed velvet—black and blue—and the rich ribbon garniture was of blue satin. Around the bottom of the skirt that reached only to the instep was a festoon trimming of the ribbon, with windmill bows between the festoons. The waist was cut off short at the back, and the skirt was sewn on it. A loop of ribbon passed around, and there was a small bow set exactly in the middle of the ribbon at the waist line.

Some of the tea jackets are very beautiful, and all are dainty and graceful. They are cut to reach nearly to the knees and are made of every conceivable material and covered with lace and ribbons. One of maize china silk had pink ribbons and white lace, and these were caught up into bunches and held by jewel pins. These are quite fashionable to use as a means of looping and fastening laces and ribbons on house toilets.

Some of the tea jackets have wide ruffles of chiffon gauze and crepe lisse so light that a breath moves them. Some white jackets have pink, maize blue or corinth red ruffles. There are some tea jackets of white foulard with blue, brown or black dots, and these, like the others, are loaded with lace and ribbon of pretty tints. These jackets worn over plain skirts give an appearance quite elaborate.

One very elegant tea jacket was of pale violet rep, with rich cream guipure with bunches of pale pink and green satin ribbons, not over half an inch wide, set in among the masses of lace. Several of them have the fronts cut out pompadour and have elbow sleeves of velvet or heavy ribbed silk to contrast with the rest. One of the most effective was very simple. There was a foundation of milliner's net, and over this was drawn a surface of fine mull. Overlying that was a piece of black dotted veiling. Around the bottom was a band of fine black chantilly insertion, with a full ruffle of lace to match, as well as down the front and around the neck and sleeves. There was a winglike arrangement of black lace on the shoulder above the bishop sleeve, intermingled with mauve magenta velvet ribbon, and there was a full rosette of the same with perhaps 20 ends of the ribbon about 15 inches long. It was very handsome and quite different from any other.

The serpentine waist has gone out, giving place to neat but fanciful basques, and these are as diverse as the tastes of the wearers. Short waists can be made into basques by the addition of a ruffle, a ripple, turret points, slashes or bias pieces sewn on. The skirts and the basques are all short and do not interfere with the general style of the waist trimming, which runs as much to ruffles and bretelles as ever.

Company Manners.

The "wife and mother" writers have for years been preaching to the effect that a woman ought to wear her best dress at home for the benefit of her household. It is doubtful if they have produced much result, because to the women of moderate circumstances, for whom such advice is intended, a new dress does not come often enough to warrant her in exposing it to the dangers of practical housekeeping. It is impossible to wear delicate clothing while cooking and serving a meal without running serious danger of soiling it, and damaged finery is infinitely worse than none. The sensible woman will cling to her neat, washable cambrics and prints so long as she has to assist in the kitchen.

"Company manners," however, never become spoiled by use, and if the above mentioned preachers would fit their arguments to a text revised in accordance with this fact, the sermon might be more practical. Why should there be such a thing as company manners? Why should we not eat, speak and move as correctly when with the family alone as when outsiders are there? The sound of the voice alone is with many persons sufficient indication whether a stranger is present or not. It costs nothing to say "If you please," and "I beg your pardon," and if husband and wife, mother and son or father and daughter meet in the street it is as cheap for her to bow and him to raise his hat as it would be if they were mere acquaintances. The habit of good manners has to be worn continuously in order to fit well—put on only occasionally, like the farmer's Sunday suit, it sits as awkwardly and places the wearer at as great a disadvantage.

THE FARMER'S BEEF BREED.

Some Good Specimens of the Fine Old Devonshire Cattle.

In districts where dairy products pay better than beef raising the agriculturist should select his cows from the well known milk, butter and cheese families. But if he is a small farmer in a rough country not convenient to market he can not do better than to cultivate the Devon cattle.

The Devons are among the hardiest of cattle, well adapted to a hilly or mountainous region. They can rough it as well as anything with hoofs and horns should be allowed to rough it. Where oxen are necessary, the gentle, intelligent Devons make the best ones of all. A Connecticut dairy farmer who makes vast quantities of Jersey butter keeps a pair of Devonshire oxen to do all the rough work of the farm and is sure it pays him. Besides that, in England, the native home of roast beef, there is a belief that the best meat which comes to the British markets is that of a stall fed Devon steer.

Western ranchmen have heretofore objected to the long horns of the Devon as being in the way of shipping them, but with the new and painless methods of dehorning now in use this objection fades out of sight.

Finally, if there be such a thing as a general purpose cow, which there is not, the Devon comes nearer it than any other breed. The cows of this family will give a fine yield of milk if well cared for, and it is only less rich than that of the Jerseys and Guernseys. The Devons have their enthusiastic advocates among the beef raisers of the west, and the American Devon Cattle club is well sustained. One of the most devoted Devons men in the country is Mr. B. R. Eldredge of Provo City, U. T.

Give Us Kentucky Saddle Horses.

The people in early days largely depended upon horseback riding for long distance travel as well as for short trips; hence they encouraged breeds of horses which could carry their burdens with ease, both to themselves and the rider. The saddlers of that early period were not the stylish and finished steppers of this. The best horses for the purpose were brought from Canada, where the pace or ambling gait had been most encouraged, while Virginia and the south Atlantic states had given more attention to the race horse. The Canadians were said to be a cross of the early French stock with the stallions obtained from New York and New England. They combined the hardiness and perhaps the gaits of the former with the better size of the latter.

When Kentucky was growing into statehood, away back in the thirties, two classes of horses mainly were imported into her territory to grow up and fatten on the succulent blue grass. They were the thoroughbred and half blood from Virginia and now and then a pacer from Canada. Naturally these were crossed, because many people did not care to keep up the breeding of race horses, and the cross produced a more useful animal, particularly for saddle purposes.

The taste for a real saddle horse is vitiated some these days by a class of "professors" from England and Germany, who conduct riding schools in eastern cities. They know nothing of the delight of horseback riding proper. They have perhaps never mounted a saddle horse of the western type and therefore make the most of what they know about the saddle horse. There is another reason for their adoption of the high trotting horse in their schools.

Many of the eastern riders are driven to horseback as a relief from the ills of counting houses. Hence they expect to find it in the high stepping trot. They are misguided and will find in the end that the ease of body and mind given by a morning ride on a gaited saddle horse will prove more beneficial than the violent jolting they get on the back of the school horse. Still it is not the province of western horsemen to dictate to their patrons. Our saddle horses are capable of taking on the trot if need be, and they will be so educated while the craze lasts, but here's hoping that it won't be long. Mounting the eastern hackneys for a saddle horse is like getting out of a fine buggy and taking an ox cart.—The Horseman.

Millet For Fattening Hogs.

"I had 31 head of hogs," says F. H. Smith of Brown county, S. D., "which I raised and fattened on millet seed, which made an average weight of 324 pounds on foot, and I fattened one hog that weighed 331 pounds. This hog gained for the last 30 days 2 1-5 pounds per day. This millet makes pork that is second to none. It is a sure crop, grows quickly and no danger of frost. It is cheaper than corn and just as good if not better for fattening hogs."

How the Great Nerve Doctor Died.

Angina pectoris was not suspected. He said that a few days in the forest of Morvan, which, standing high and being well watered, is cool, would set him all right again, and as soon as he could he left town on a natural history and archaeology excursion. The other tourists were Drs. Deboue and Strauss and some other old pupils. They fell on a pleasant inn at Settons, near Chateau Chimon, and sat up talking about the unexplored regions of biology.

It was a delightful evening. A lake was stretched out before them. Dr. Charcot spoke in connection with it of the soothing and renewing action of nature on a jaded physique. Plans were made for excursions, and it was arranged that they were to avoid the heat of the day by starting early in the morning. When the inn servant went to call Dr. Charcot, he found him dead. A half written letter lay on his desk. It was to his son, for whom he every evening wrote a lively account of the tour. The last words were: "I hope to finish tomorrow, as we must rise before 6. I must now try and sleep."—London News.

Relics That Are Priceless.

There have been placed on exhibition in the Massachusetts building some relics of priceless value which are for the first time exposed to public view.

The first of these is a copper watch worn by Miles Standish during the historical trip of the Mayflower in 1620. Then there is a series of pictures of houses in England where the Puritan pilgrims met before undertaking their voyage to America. One is an accurate picture of the manor house at Scrooby, England, the official residence of the Archbishop of York, which was the meeting place of the pilgrims when they decided to make their eventful western journey.

In the same building there is on exhibition the original manuscript of Charles Sumner's speech in congress on that historic day in May, 1855, when the orator was attacked by Brooks. The manuscript was handed by Sumner to Congressman Williams immediately after the delivery of the speech and has since been carefully preserved.—Chicago Herald.

Scared by a Bicycle.

A horse attached to a wagon driven by John Grafton took fright at a bicycle in Prospect park on Wednesday night and plunged, with its driver, into a small lake. The horse floundered in up to its shoulders and the wheels sank deep into the mud. A policeman jumped into the water, and seizing the horse by the reins threw a line to those on shore and with their help pulled the rig to land.—Brooklyn Times.

On this doctors don't disagree. It may be regarded as an assured fact that the delegates to the Pan American Congress at Washington, who travel over the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway will, with one accord, praise its scenery and train service. There is nothing in the way of lovely mountain views and picturesque valleys of the Virginias, to compare with that through which the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad passes. There is nothing of historic nature in America as great as a trip through the Virginias and there is no other railroad in America superior to the C. & O. in the smoothness and stability of its tracks, the F. Perhaps some of our readers would like to know in what respect Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better than any other. We will tell you. When this remedy is taken as soon as a cold has been contracted and before it has become settled in the system, it will counteract the effect of the cold and greatly lessen its severity, and it is the only remedy that will do this. It acts in perfect harmony with nature and aids nature in relieving the lungs, opening the secretions, loosening the mucus and causing its expulsion from the air cells of the lungs and restoring the system to a strong and healthy condition. No other remedy in the market possesses these remarkable properties. No other will cure a cold so quickly.

THE young men will give an impromptu hop at Walton's Opera House tonight. The music will be furnished by the Danville orchestra and a good time is expected. ARE you a close buyer? Hughes & Tate.

THE Odd Fellows had a grand time at Lexington, Tuesday, and they tell us that nothing was left undone that would add to the pleasure of the occasion. The band boys acquitted themselves most creditably and were just too killing in their handsome uniforms.

A TREAT.—A musical and elocutionary entertainment will be given at the College Chapel this evening by Misses Sue Millhouser, pianist, Lucy A. Johns, vocalist, and Inez Abernathy, elocutionist. The program is a very comprehensive one and a treat may be expected. The public is cordially invited to be present.

OUR clever friend, Col. Underwood, of the Hubble vicinity, is grieved over the thought that he will have no sorghum this year. He made a 10-gallon can of as fine as was ever seen, but forgot and left it out doors. The next morning the can and contents were conspicuously missing, but where it went to he does not know.

SHERIFF MENEVEE took Mack Ferrell to the penitentiary Tuesday morning to serve his life sentence. A number of the young man's friends called at the jail and were at the train to tell him good bye and to wish him the best that could be had during the remainder of his sad life. Jailer Owens says he has been a splendid prisoner and gave him little or no trouble during his incarceration.

MR. I. M. Bruce tells us that about 25 years ago a young man named Bud Doble broke and trained horses for the late Harvey Helm at his farm on the Knob Lick pike and that he is of the opinion that he is the gentleman who has made such a reputation as a driver. The description answers to some extent to the well-known Bud Doble and we would not be greatly surprised if he is not the same gentleman.

THE good, dyed-in-the-wool democrats of Rowland are rather worried over Judge T. L. Shelton's actions in the post-office matter. They claim that he has found a more lucrative business and for that reason has turned the post-office and fixtures over to that clever gentleman, but uncompromising republican, Mr. Frank Cordier. Of course the judge will still be postmaster in name, but it does look as if he could have found, without much trouble, a democrat who would have been glad to have had the opportunity of being made deputy postmaster and for it received the greater portion of the emoluments of the office as they claim Mr. Cordier does.

A COUPLE of boys, one from the country and the other a town urchin, played "hooky" the other day, and while their fellow pupils were pouring over their books, these two youths strolled out to Mr. Jonathan Owsley's and stole, "just for fun," his fine bird dog. Mrs. Owsley saw the boys take the dog away and when her husband came in from the fields she informed him of it. Mr. Owsley is very fond of his dog and he immediately began search for him, as well as the boys who stole him. He did not find his pet, however and he sent word to Marshal Newland to keep a look out for him. John was not long in finding both the boys and dog and cabbaged the whole crew. The boys were almost frightened to death at the thought of being in the officer's custody and plead with Mr. Newland to release them. He, after much persuasion, let them go on the promise that they would give him $5 and pay for the dog's delivery to Mr. Owsley. This was readily agreed to and the boys sought their friends and borrowed the necessary amount. It was a good lesson for them and believing they have paid enough for their fun we will not hamillate them further by printing their names.

EXTRA fine roasted coffee in bulk at Farris & Hardin's. ATTENTION HUNTERS.—A complete line of guns, rifles, loaded shells, hunting coats, all at bottom prices. W. B. McRoberts.

FOR RENT.—A cottage of three rooms, kitchen and cellar, with good electric; situated on Lancaster street. Inquire at Higgins & Watts' coal office. DR. P. W. LOGAN has rented his farm near Milledgeville to Stigall Bros. for $1,300 per year and will move to Knoxville and resume the practice of medicine.

Look at your label, see how much you are behind and send us the money. We are tired of waiting. This is meant for everybody who is in arrears, so take heed and govern yourself accordingly. THE fire alarm was given at 4:30 P. M. yesterday and in a few seconds the fire company was out and on the scene. It proved to be Mote Ballenger's house on the creek back of Dr. Peyton's, but as it was only a little paper burning in the kitchen, he lost nothing and the fire went out itself.

C. T. BAIRD, adjuster for the Royal Insurance Co., of Liverpool, was here yesterday and settled with Albert Hommel for his loss. The insurance was taken out on the afternoon of the fire, it will be remembered, and Agent W. A. Tribble had not written the policy. This did not matter, though, and Mr. Hommel was paid over the entire amount, $500.
